JOANNA LUMLEY is the lovely, mysterious Sapphire. It marks her first television appearance, apart from interviews, since her great success in "The New Avengers." A former model, she played small parts in films and numerous TV productions before international fame came in that series. Nothng she has played before has called for such a portrayal as Sapphire, a girl possessing uncanny powers.

The Story

Who are they? What are they? Sapphire and Steel are the two strangest, most impellingly fascinating characters ever to come to television. Their adventures have spell-binding, imagination-challenging appeal as they face the perils of stemming the attempts of Time to break through into the Present.

Their first investigation takes them to a lonely house. The parents of two children have mysteriously disappeared into the corridor of Time. Their second investigation has the setting of a remote, disused railway station and encounters with living ghosts.

DAVID McCALLUM plays the ice-cold Steel. Famous in particular for his roles in "The Man From U.N.C.L.E.," "Colditz" and "The Invisible Man," he now has the strangest part he has ever played. With a musical background, he gained stage experience before entering television. He has also appeared in numerous films and has won praise as a director.
